Ten-time Emmy Award winning Visionalist Entertainment Productions was established in 1997 by Executive Producer/Director Keith Famie who created a series of adventurous cooking shows in exotic locations around the globe for various network-affiliate television stations. Produced both in short news format segments and hour-long documentaries, Famie quickly developed his own unique style of film production.

In 2000, Famie was selected as a cast member of the CBS reality series "Survivor: The Australian Outback," where Keith was one of the final three contestants.

Since these early years, Famie and his VEP team have produced a wide range of primetime programs ranging from an all guys trip to Russia with the Detroit Red Wings alumni team, to the touching series, "Our Story Of" about immigrants coming to America.

In 2013, Famie introduced the first in a series of films that focused on men and women as we age. "The Embrace of Aging" is a multi-episode series that debuted on Detroit Public Television. In the fall of 2014, DPTV will start airing a 13-part series on women and aging.
